

University Accredited National Programme 2012

Diploma Level: Training Matters in Dementia Care.

Benefit from:

- Learning and practising how to deliver dementia care training that really matters.
- Shifting the focus as a trainer from awareness training to learning, training and coaching that achieves direct service improvement.
- Designing a dementia care training workshop at different levels of need.
- Receiving helpful feedback on your training and facilitation skills.
- Knowing how to facilitate the adult learning cycle in dementia care learning.
- Growing your own personal skills development in being a trainer.

Suitable for:

- People with a role in providing training and service development in a dementia care setting.
- Freelance trainers.

Why participate?

Being a dementia care trainer requires an understanding of the ethics, values and principles of dementia care training, the development of skills in facilitation and a clear grasp of person centred care in practice. However, dementia care trainers need to be able to demonstrate how to turn training into action, how to coach individuals and how to lead service development changes. This workshop programme will provide an overview of best practice in achieving this.

If you attend the course and successfully complete the assessment you will be able to gain 15 academic credits at either Level 3 or M with either the University of Brighton or the University of Surrey.

“Dementia Care Matters is far more than a Training Company; it is a Change Agent, a Motivator and Critical Friend.” (Home Owner, Manager)
